

Course Standards

English Language

Generally, overseas students will share classes and be expected to attain the same standards as their RN or RM counterparts. Courses are conducted in English, and all students will require a certain International English Language Test Score (IELTS test) before their nomination is accepted. On most of the course pages in this catalogue the required IELTS score is listed. For other courses, IDT(RN) will be able to advise of the expected standard. The IELTS test is available at British Councils in most capital cities around the world. English language training can be provided at Britannia Royal Naval College Dartmouth or at a range of commercial schools if preferred. Students who choose to attend commercial schools will be expected to make their own arrangements.

Performance on Course

The continuous monitoring of students throughout training enables instructors to identify those who are having problems meeting course standards. On completion of training final reports will be forwarded to the originating authority. The originator will be informed in instances where the student is failing to progress or problems are occurring that could lead to their withdrawal from training. The overseas DA in London will be encouraged to discuss any problems with the student, however the safety of other course members and staff will be the primary consideration.

Student Accommodation

Students will normally be accommodated in Service accommodation alongside their UK counterparts at the appropriate level according to rank. This allows the exchange of professional, social, and individual views and is considered an important and mutually beneficial part of Naval training. Students who choose to live in private accommodation will be expected to make their own arrangements.

Students on courses longer than six months may bring their spouse and children. They are entitled to apply for a Married Quarter, however, the responsibility of arranging accommodation lies with the Embassy / High Commission (forms are available from IDT(RN)).

Fees and Funding

All UK training must be paid in advance. The normal arrangement is that an invoice will be raised by the Director General Financial Management (DGFM) up to 10 weeks before the start of the course. This will request payment of the course fee and the appropriate messing and accommodation charges. Payment is due to DBA on receipt of the invoice, and is to be paid prior to the delivery or the training.
