MARITIME WARFARE

Aim of course

To develop an understanding of the doctrine, planning and conduct of maritime operations in a joint and combined environment. To provide an appreciation of the factors involved in decision making at the Component Commander level and below.

Outline syllabus

This is a modular course; week one provides a grounding in all elements of maritime warfare; week two covers Command and includes an introduction to basic campaign and operational planning tools; week three covers other Operations and, together with week four which focuses on Conflict, involves more advanced maritime planning exercises.

Entry standards

- ◆ Course is intended primarily for officers about to take up seagoing or front line appointments in command and those appointed as senior warfare specialists on Flag staffs. It is also suitable for officers likely to be involved in planning maritime operations. The security level of the course is Secret (releasable to NATO, Australia and New Zealand)

Remarks

- ◆ A pre-course reading list will be provided on request
- ◆ A curriculum vitae with full professional details covering operational background, recent tactical experience, last job and next job is required 8 weeks before joining the course
